Featured Project - Gilead

Recent News

Ross Purcell's division have recently completed the successful handover of the Gilead Project in Cambridge. The project was headed up by Jay Hollis who was ably assisted by Mick Turvill having recently turned his back on a star studded fixing career to join the dark side of management

The ash fluting to the double height reception space and throughout the lift lobbies is a striking natural look that sits well within the light and airy surroundings

The project consisted of the suspended ceiling and partition package. This included feature ash ceilings and cladding

The key to the successful installation of the above ceiling was the co-ordination with service trades to ensure the specialist lighting sat correctly upon installation of the baffles

The effect of the ceiling and surrounding areas create a fantastic communal breakout space

The office area ceilings are made up of SAS System 330 and plasterboard margins. The setting out of these areas was crucial with cylindrical lighting features integrated throughout

Above is a photo of the full height atrium space that highlights the extent of the bulkheads installed by Integra and the quality of finish achieved by Jay, Mick and their team

Integra are sure that both Isg and Gilead are pleased with the exceptional quality of design and installation delivered throughout the project

As in all good sides, there is always someone who needs to run down the clock when you're up against it. In this case it was Sean who took a dive to give everyone a breather...stinger!

Due to Sean's performance close comparisons were made with an ex Ballon D'or winner, I think we all know where they keep the trophy!!

A special mention this month to Ross Newby who is working on the One New Oxford Street Project.

After hearing the awful news story regarding the Greenfell Tower disaster last week he and a few close friends decided to donate as many items of food, water, bedding, clothes as they could spare.

After an appeal to friends and family via social media they soon had over a hundred people offering donations and the car they were to use was soon overloaded.

A further appeal for appropriate vehicles was accepted by another friend who offered the use of 3 company vans.

All the hundreds of packages were dropped to the surrounding centres that were used to shelter those effected by the fire. I'm sure that the effort made was hugely appreciated and the items of clothing etc. have been put to good use.

A massive effort Ross, fair play to you and your friends.

Our thoughts are with those that have been effected by this latest of tragedies.

Continuing Sean McGuire's busy month, both he and his wife Liz took part in The Regents Park 10k Run and completed the course in a shade over 2 hours. In doing so, they raised a combined total of nearly £1500 for Macmillan Cancer Support. A fantastic charity that is very close to their hearts. Top effort Sean and Liz.

Anyone who wishes to donate can still do so at the below link:

Integra Receive National Award

Integra submitted its entry for the national FIS Award for Suspended Ceilings last year and attended the awards lunch at The Dorchester Hotel on Tuesday 6th June.

Having seen in recent years the honours generally being taken by smaller projects who are judged under the same criteria, we were happy to find out we had been shortlisted.

As it turned out, not only had we been shortlisted, but we had in fact been awarded 1st prize.

The trophy is now sitting happily alongside the same award we won in 2011.

Last, but certainly not least...

All at Integra would like to wish Devan Swart and his wife Lisa a huge congratulations on the birth of their gorgeous baby girl Edén on the 16th of April.

We wish you all the best for the future.

Thank god she looks like her mother!! ;-)
